Experience and Expertise

Katherine Ulman has been employed with Dow Corning Corporation for more than 35 years. She is currently a global regulatory compliance manager for Dow Corning Healthcare, as well as a Dow Corning associate scientist. Ulman has held such positions as global technology coordinator and regulatory manager of the Dow Corning Healthcare Industries Materials Site. She has worked in the development and characterization of pharmaceutical excipient and medical device raw materials/components for nearly 25 years. Much of her earlier career was dedicated to the synthesis of novel silicone monomers and polymers/copolymers.

Ulman is a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Association of Pharmaceutical Scientists and the Control Release Society. As an active member of the International Pharmaceutical Excipient Council (IPEC) Americas, she was recently elected to the organization's executive board as the vice chair for Science and Regulatory Policy. She has published and presented several papers in her field and has taught international courses on silicones for pharmaceutical/biomedical applications and medical adhesives through Technomic Publishing Co.

Ulman earned her Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry from the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology in 1976.
